

External or Internal Cephalic Version

Also known as	1. ECV2. ICV
Description	Cephalic version, or version, is a procedure used to turn a fetus from a breech (feet or butt-down) position or side-lying (transverse) position into a head-down (vertex) position before labor begins. When successful, version makes it possible for a vaginal birth. It is typically performed around 37 weeks. External cephalic version is done by the physician manoeuvring the baby from the outside. Internal cephalic version involves a hand inserted through the cervix.
